1) Passage

Anshuman's parents had noticed that he was developing some bad habits. Naturally, they began to warn him time and again, but all in vain. Anshuman just wouldn't listen. He refused to believe that he was letting those bad habits be a hold over him. Gentle words, strict warnings, a scolding now and then - his parents tried everything short of beating him up. And that they would never do. However unhappy they themselves were, they wanted to be loving and gentle as they tried to correct their son's ways. Anshuman had gone to stay on his grandfather's farm with his parents. Early one morning, his father took him for a walk around the farm. He was describing the specialities of various plants and vines and bushes and trees to Anushman. Suddenly, he pointed at a small seedling near a plant which was a weed. After a while they came upon the same weed, it has grown slightly bigger. Anshuman's father told him to pull out this plant too. He told him to uproot the weed carefully making sure that no trace of the root was left in the soil.

Extract -

In our little boat to glide
 On the water blue and wide,
 While the sky is smooth and bright,
 What could give us more delight?

See the ripples, how they run,
 Twinkling brightly in the sun;
 While reflected we can see
 Shadows of each hill and tree.

See the lillies round and large,
Floating near the reedy marge
Where the bulrush has its place
And the heavy water-mace.

See the great green dragonfly,
And the swallow skimming by.
See the fishes spring and gleam,
Ere they splash into the stream,

See the bright kingfisher too
Dart a gleam of green and blue.
These are all around our boat
On the water whilst we float.
